SPEECH OF WENDELL PHILLIPS BEFORE THE ANTI-SLAVERY SOCIETY. Last evening the Anti-Slavery Society held a session at Steinway Hall, at which Wendell Phillips pre-sided. In opening the meeting Mr. Phillips said: Before calling on any speaker, I will take the liberty of reading calling on any speaker, a service and the speaker. This additional resolution:

Reselved. That we denounce the proposition new before Congress to abolish elective government in the District of Columbia in whole or in part, as a plet to cheat the freezen of the District of their new-born part, as a plet to cheat the freezen of the District, to see that this recedum; and that we call our all true hearted Senators and Representative of the District, to see that this inderstand there is a project proposed by Senators Morrill and Harlan, I think, to change the form of the District Government, to place it largely or entirely the the qualification of large estate, landed or otherto-the consequence of such a provision would to take almost entirely from the hands of hlacks any control over the government of District. There would be, of course, a large ming to such a plan on the part of some persons he District, because of their prejudice against negro frage, and because of their soreness toward the freeda, because, perhaps, of their idea that such a change

the facilitate the growth of the District, and increase value of real estate where the neighboring counties citement to imitation in the States themselves. We are ob sta principes; we are first to denounce any plan to finish the negre question by ingenious arrangements; and it seems to mes we should utter very decisively our protest against the nation setting an example of a government based upon anything but the universal suffrage of its citizens. [Applause.] Certainly, in the districts exclusively under the control of the United States, we have a claim to universal auffrage, without respect to race, or color, or previous condition (applause), and of course, as an individual, I should add—without regard to sex [applause]—should be fairly tried. I will leave that resolution on the table.

Col. T. W. Higginson was then presented. He said that the first utterance he heard Mr. Dickens make in the readings he recently gave in our country was: "Marley was dead, to begin with; there can be no doubt about that." He felt that the Abolitionists could now exultantly assert: "Slavery is dead, to begin with; there can be no doubt about that." [Applause.] This was our guaranty—an indemnisy for the past and a security for the future. The speaker reviewed the progress of the negro in the respect of the country during the recent war; the dangers that beset our country at the present time. The address was marked in matter by much thought, and by vigor and eloquence of manner. He referred to the time when Judge Curtis of Massachusetss, recently defending the President, supported Andrew Johnson for breaking law—resident, supported Andrew Johnson for breaking law—remisself (Col. Higginson) and Mr. Phillips. In eloging he again congratulated the advocates of the original Anti-Slavery movement that Slavery was irretrievably dead—that our children had something to rejoice for, if they work as hard in their place as we have had to work in ours. s hard in their place as we have had to work in ours.

as hard in their place as we have and to work in ours. [Applause.]
Miss Anna Dickinson came forward and briefly addressed the audience. She endeavored to show that the position of the black woman to-day was no better than before her emancipation from slavery, because she had simply changed her master from alwhite owner to a black husband in many cases. She demanded freedom for woman, as for man, irrespective of color, and, while giving Mr. Wendell Phillips due credit for his years of service in the cause of woman's rights, took occasion to enter her protost against the tenor of a portion of his morning address, intimating that he had said that weman's rights mist stand aside until the rights of the black man are fully secured.

SPEECH OF WENDELL PHILLIPS. Mr. CHAIRMAN: The value of the Anti-Slavery platform for 30 years has been in the utter freedom of its views. ng extemporaneously, as all of us do, we only see directly before us the idea we wish to express, and are aften heedless of the possible misunderstanding, or of the limitation or exception which we ought to make in the statement of the truth. And so in regard to all topics statement of the truth. And so in regard to all topics sacidentally touching in any speech it is impossible that a man should always so graduate his praise, and so guard the exact terms of his expression as to grave to every possibility of mistake. I remember the first speech I ever made in this city, many, many years ago, at an Anti-Slavery meeting. The discussion was upon the Constitution of the United States, upon which I undertook to express the opinion that it did not intend to guard the rights of the blackgrace on this continent, but subjected them—helpiess, unprotected, unshielded—to the mercy, and not the justice, of the white race; and in expressing it hurriedly I gave so great of fense to the colored men of the andience that a committee wated upon me at the close of the meeting to know whether I did really mean that the colored race on this continent had no right to the protection of the law. Well, whether it was my fault, in the hurry of a young man's extemporaneous address, or whether it was the continent had no right to the protection of the law. Well, whether it was my fault, in the hurry of a young man's extemporaneous address, or whether it was the oversensitiveness of the race that were obliged to guard so vigilantly every admission made for or against them, it does not matternow to consider. So in every reference that we make to collateral causes, to questions that he side by side with our own. It is impossible always to spare the time for a full explanation of one's views; and a friend should not hold as guilty of a hurried word, of a half expression of an ill-considered description. We should be taken in totality. It is an old question which once stirred the orthodox pulpit of New-England, whether every sermon should contain the whole gospel so that no single hearer, if he never heard another address, should go away without hearing the whole counsel of God. Well, of course there were two sides to the question; there are to this. I made a reference this morning to the influence of woman. I spoke of the intrigues at washington. I said one of the elements which turned away the action of the Senate was not aboveboard political causes, ambitions and issues; it was the indirect, hidin a content of the counter was not an over the counter of the cou out of all civilized law. As was said long ago, the commore law of England is a state on elvitization, or course its. And it is not the Shages to elvitization of the course its. And it is not the Shages of the course of the c thave a right to enter the States and insist that the ground work on which the nation rests shall be firm. What is nationally but an empty name if I cannot go into South Carolina and say on behalf of Massachusetts what its suffrage shall bet I have a right to go there and insist that she what have a common school system, and teach the man who casts the ballot that governs Massachusetts the language, so that I can speak and write and discuss the question with him. (Applause.) Otherwise nationality means one solid whole. If that meaning is accepted you cannot degrade Charleston without degrading Boston. Therefore I have a right to follow out the doctrine—to go to South Carolina and demand where she lodges her power and how she treats it, and how she educates it. If I go to Chicago with that idea of nationality, you will demand that a constitutional amendment shall be made making common schools obligatory upon the States, and impartial suffrage also. ("We won't be contented until you do.") And now I wish to say a word in reference to Mr. Higginson's thought that I do not love Grant chough. I would rather trust Gen. Grant in the White House without a platform that could be adopted [great applies], that is if he goes there in consequence of this plot of Fessenden and Trumbull, to checkmate the nation in order to put him there. I like direct above board, honest, respectable roguery [applause and laughter], better than virtue in the disguise of enemies. I have

Now that the different styles of Spring fashions are known, it is well to consider all particulars, and to state what advantage may be drawn from one costume or another, and in which way this or that ancient style can be improved upon. Lace, especially, creates more excitement than anything clse. It is used as skirt, for dresses, and as trimming, and there will be many tollets unde of that material for watering-places; I have heard the remark that these tollets must be pretty expensive, and wish to observe, therefore, that it is not absolutely necessary to use Chantilly lace, and that any pretty fancy lace will be perfectly admissible, and will not be more expensive than other tollets. You meet with tunics and polonaises made entirely of black lace, worn in a very original manner on dresses of blue, maize, corn-colored or Metternichgreen silk. The tunic may be allowed to hang down in its full length, or looped up at the sides by roestes of ribbon, corresponding with the shade of the skirt. The tunic ends in a corselet on the waist, forming a point on the back, and ent square in front. If it is intended for an evening toilet, the waist is cut very low and bordered by a row of small plaits. As a walking-dress, this toilet will look very handsome with a mantilla bonnet, made all of lace, crossing over the chest. This style reminds us of the Andalusian costumes, and the artistic richness of the Renaissance. This is what can be made of a lace tunic. Let usee now what may be made of a Chantilly or any other description of lace shawl. Point lace is not worn any more this year. It would impart to the toilet a vulgar appearance, not corresponding with the generally adopted fancy costumes. Still, as people do not very willingly give up a fine, rich point-lace, it can be used in the following manner, so as to appear at once new and grace ful; The whole point-lace is spread in all its width, and soven or eight large hollow folds fortuce, supported on the back and shoulders by a silk puffing, resembling, on a large scale, the plaited drapery of a corselet. The point, ions are known, it is well to consider all particulars, and to state what advantage may be drawn from one costume bia College Law-School was celebrated last evening at the Academy of Music. But a small audience was present on the oceasion. President F. A. P. Barnard of Columbia College presided over the exercises. The opening prayer was effered by the Rev.C. A. Duffle, D. D., chaplain of the same institution. Prof. Theo. W. Dwight, Li.D., delivered the first address, in which he spoke of the rise and aim of the Law-School. It was first started in 1858, and already it had 180 in the College and over 600 Alumni. Allusions of a highly commendatory nature were made to the graduating class. The speaker then dwelt in touching terms on the character and genius of the late Hon. Alex. Bradford, and enjoined on the Alumni to emulate his example.

L. Bradford Prince, in an alumni cration, next spoke in substance as follows: Columbia College and Dr. Dwight were synonimous terms. There was no Professor better known or more beloved than the aforementioned gentleman. Mr. Prince then called the attention of the graduating class to their duties as American citizens. They were going out into the world to be a great power in the country, and they should exert all their influence for the good of the nation. The ballot as well as primary meetings should allke claim their highest regard as the great controlling agent in politics. A new chapter was to be opened in the world's history, and the alumni would probably play an important part in the transactions of the day. Let them, therefore, act to the best of their ability.

The valedctory address on the subject "Typercritiprobably play an important part in the transactions of the day. Lot them, therefore, act to the best of their ability.

The valedictory address on the subject "Typercriticism" was delivered by Samuel H. Valentine. The oration was of a highly commendable nature, and the speaker was warmly applianded. Mr. Chas. H. Tracy, spoke in cloquent terms, welcoming the members of the graduating class to the brotherhood of Alumni. He dwelt on the nature and aims of the profession, and the duties incumbent on all those who entered its practice.

The prizes in the department of Municipal Law were awarded as follows: The first prize of $250 to "Sigma," Henry Kiersted Coddington; the second prize of $150 to "Cio," George Chuton; the tairo prize of subject to "Xanthus," William Greenly Nicoli. Honorable mention was made of the essays and answers of Morris M. Budlong, George B. Smith, and Samuel H. Valentine. The Committee of Award consisted of Messrs, Marshall S. Bidwell, Joshua M. Van Cott, and Gilbert M. Spier. The prize in the department of Political Science and Constitutal Law was awarded to ("Mountaineer") James A. McCreery. Honorable mention was made of the essay signed "Lincoln."

The degree of Bachelor of Laws was then conferred upon the members of the graduating class. front and behind in the material. This fichts, which goes about ten centimetres below the belt, is bordered by a broad lace flounce, and is in size equal to an ordinary cleak. The same lace is formed in a flounce, fastened by folds of two flagors in width, and goes all round the dress in the shape of a tunic at the sides. A round belt fastens it to the waist, and gives the garment the appearance of a tight-fitting cassock, half lace and half material. I have seen this style on light blac sik, looking very rich and exceedingly graceful; the very long skirt was altogether without triumings. A toilet of gray taffets deserves likewise to be mentioned. It had nothing but satin folds for ornament, describing in front a real square apron, reaching down to within is centimeters from the bottom of the skirt. The mantelet was bordered with the same folds, cut round behind, went a little below the waist, and crossed in front with the square flags failing down over the skirt; the upper part was ornamented by a large knot behind, its form putting you somewhat in mind of a hood. I may as well add that this mantelet might be replaced by a fichu Marie Autoineite, knotted behind, and bordered all round by a much-plaited flounce, 10 centimeters in width.

favor of Senator Wilson as the Republican candidate for Vice-President. It says:

An original anti-slavery man, his long political career has shown an unsworving fidelity to principle, and a moral integrity that has won for him the respect and confidence even of his enemies. Firm and unyielding in his convictions, he has never displayed a bigoted partisanship that could not do justice to such as differed from him. Always radical in his views, in his spirit he has been moderate, avoiding extreme measures that were of doubtful propriety. He has thus made friends, where others, even less radical, have created enemies. He has gained a national reputation for honesty and incorruptibility. No man would dare approach him with a bribe for any purpose. His moral character is above reproach. He is a strict temperance man and a degided Christian. He is an indefatigable worker, and as Chairman of the Military Committee his services have been of inestimable value to the country. He has great political sagacity, and eminent practical wisdom in adapting means to the attainment of his desired ends. His nomination is one, therefore, eminently fit to be made. Should any calamity call him to the occupancy of the Presidential char, his character and previous course furnish a guarantee that he would not disgrace the office, and no rash act of his would perit the interests of the country.
